KEEPING IN TOUCH

Managing a Long Distance Relationship

er experience while messing around with local men. It's boring to see the same faces everyday. You wake up, go to work, and go home to go to sleep and start over the next day. Leave the routine act as just a part of your work life- your dating life should be the complete opposite. No one wants to be bored every minute of their lives.

Personality plays a large contributor to wanting a long distance relationship. Have you ever had a period of time while dating where you felt as if you were dating the same type of men? It never worked out because of a similar personality trait that you were always running into? Most likely it was because of that very same reason. Even though styles aren't the same, people who live in the same area tend to act the same in one way or another. Sometimes it works out, and sometimes it doesn't. It's obvious that brothas from New York are not like brothas from St. Louis, and brothas from Texas are for damn sure not like brothas from Los Angeles. Experiencing different personalities is a great thing. Don't settle for the brothas around you if you don't want to, you might miss out on a good thing.

The best scenario for a long distance relationship is the business trip. An attractive brotha comes to your area for a few days on work related issues. Through one way or another you two hook up and have lunch or go out to a movie. He pays you attention in a way that you are not used to. He treats you like gold and you can do nothing but smile when you are in his presence. After a couple of days, he announces that his flight leaves in the morning and he doesn't know the next time he is coming back to visit. So, you're stuck at home wondering, "Why don't the ones who live around me act the same way?" It happens all the time. A potential relationship shot down because of bad location. It doesn't have to be that way.

Usually, a LDR is started from one of two things. One of those things is just being at the right place at the right time. Mainly when a guy is in your area for business or personal reasons. The other thing is online dating services. There are other ways, but these are two more common situations. Availability is an important factor when pursuing a LDR. After all, there is nothing more frustrating than talking to the "man of your dreams" on the phone and knowing that you may not ever get to physically meet him.

If you are fortunate enough to get to meet your long distance man while he is visiting, you have more of an upper hand. You get to sit and talk about what happens after he leaves. Do you continue to talk with each other? Will you put forth the effort to visit him? Will he visit you? What type of relationship do you two want to continue with? There are always many questions to ask when negotiating plans for furthering a relationship. If he is worth it, go ahead and take that chance- you got to meet him for a reason. He could have met with anyone, but he chose to spend time with you.

Meeting a guy online who lives far away is usually more of a gamble. Many guys lie, use fake pictures, old pictures (when they use to be cute in high school), or might not be serious about meeting at all. If you're able, be adventurous. If you have the extra money lying around and the time, go for it. But we have all heard the horror stories of men traveling across the country in hopes of meeting that guy who has described himself to look like Boris Kodjoe or Tyson Beckford, and when he got to the door, he looked more like Shrek or Big Foot. Just be careful, know how to handle yourself and always have a plan B, even plans C-Z. It is exciting, and if he doesn't end up being the man of your dreams, you will at least have a great story to tell your friends when you get back home.

After all of the footwork is done and you are in a LDR, then what? Keep his attention. Make sure he is the only thing on your mind. Make him a part of your life. Tell him the truth- if you had a good night out and flirted with a couple guys, tell him. He understands that you had a life before you met him and he doesn't want you to bore yourself when he is away. You don't have to always tell everything about what happened, but it helps to give him an idea of your life, even if you have to give him a G-rated version of an X-rated situation (that'll be our little secret). But on a serious note, if you are going to carry on with a long distance relationship, be sincere about it. Usually what happens is that the relationship starts to fade away, because neither one of you can find time and you finally give up.

Dedicate yourself to it. If you like him and you what to be with him, but he lives a thousand miles away, do what you got to do. Love has no boundaries on when and how it appears, regardless of how far apart the two people are. Always remember that he is in the same situation you are, or else the both of you would not be talking. And if he wants to come and visit you, let him. There is no company like company you can have sex with. Alcohol shouldn't be the only thing imported from another place to your mouth.

So go find out about those hard east coast brothas, experience some southern hospitality from them dirty south boyz, swing with the fellas in the Midwest, and party with the men on the west coast. When you get tired of dealing with local men, never rule out the idea that the one you want may be the one you run in to on your next vacation.

MINIBAR, Chicago

This Non-Smoking, Hotel Lounge Bar Is All of the Service and Selection Without the Hotel.

By: Yetu Robinson

After living in both New York City and San Francisco, both cities with smoking moratoriums, I began smoking when I arrived to Chicago. Why? No, not because I have an oral fixation, but rather it was convenient to smoke in Chicago clubs, lounges and restaurants.

Then, enters MiniBar, Chicago's first non-smoking lounge/bar. I laughed at the thought of a Chicago bar taking the bold step to ban smoking—that is, until I experienced the flava of MiniBar.

MiniBar is a refreshing change to the smoky, dark, less sophisticated bars/lounges lining the streets of North Halsted. MiniBar is light and airy, reminiscent of a lounge you might find in L.A. but without the attitude. The patrons and the staff are gorgeous and friendly, the music is soothing and melodic, the drink selection is different and cosmopolitan, and the environment is smoke free! What more could you ask for?

And even if you smoke, MiniBar has a roped off outdoor section that offers smokers an escape for their fix, where smokers are kept company by the MiniBar bouncer who is certain to be hot!

Lounge goers will appreciate the infused-flavored cocktails such as watermelon martinis and vanilla vodkas. And not to mention, MiniBar's own concierge services, usually associated with fancy hotels, will help you secure reservations at nearby restaurants.

I highly encourage Chicago residents and visitors to experience the flava of MiniBar. You'll be glad you did.

BETO - ROGER STAR - MARENO

Carnival In Rio

I met Beto and Mareno earlier in the day at an ice cream shop in Rio de Janeiro where they worked. Both agreed to pose for my camera, admitting to being exhibitionists at heart. When I picked them up after their shift ended I was surprised to learn that they had a third friend who was also interested in posing. It turns out that both these hunky brazilians were ga ga over him and were determined to get him in bed for the first time, while using the modeling as the bait.

We arrived at Roger Star's apartment around 7. Right away Beto and Mareno greeted Roger with a jock-like hug as he handed each of us a beer. For my part, I thought Roger was the most beautiful boy I've seen in Brazil since I arrived here three days ago. I nearly tripped over my own words as I approached him about modeling for this magazine.

He blushed but agreed, saying he needed the money and just hoped his current girlfriend wouldn't find out. I got my camera ready to take some test shots on the living room couch. I instructed the boys to take off their shirts. I asked Roger (who Beto and Mareno were eyeing with pure hunger) what turned him on sexually.

He admitted that his flat, hairless and succulent nipples were beyond sensitive to touch and tongue. Before he could finish his statement, Beto grinned and said "Like this...?" He was suddenly laying half-over Roger.

His pointy tongue flicking all over Roger's right tit.

Roger gasped and tried to push Beto away. However, Moreno was on his other side on the couch. His arms encircled Roger's in a hug as he leaned in and slid his tongue into Roger's left ear. He hissed as he let out a slight breath. I saw Roger Shutter. His hands dropped as Mareno help him by the arms. Beto worked on his right pec, then his left. Roger's breathing turning heavy as he stared down at the young, caramel-covered Beto, caressing and nibbling at one of the most sensitive parts of his body.

My camera kept snapping away as Roger tried to concentrate, smiling for the camera and blushing pink with shyness at the same time. Moreno gently turned his face toward him and slid his tongue into Roger's mouth. The cute middleman resisted at first, teeth coming together and a grunt of surprise bursting from his lips. Mareno wouldn't stop, his mouth opening to cover Roger's as Beto's hand slid to Roger's crotch. Roger gave up at last and his teeth parted and he was kissing Mareno. The two men slurping and sucking on each other's lips as if they would never come up for air.

After that, the boys forgot I was even there, as Beto and Mareno made it their mission to strip Roger and have their way with him. Which they did with no inhibitions. Both men taking advantage of Roger with a passion unique to the young Brazilian male.

Rio is a city where men loving men is not only tolerated, but often celebrated. And with these three, good Lord, is there reason to celebrate.

MUCH ADO OVER OUTING

By Jasmyne A. Cannick

No single article that I have ever written or protest that I have participated in has garnered as much attention as the "Outing Black Pastors" campaign that I did with my colleague Keith Boykin.

It was a simple idea hatched in a casual conversation of Black gay activists while in Washington D.C. Frustrated with the increasing number of attacks on same-gender loving people by Black pastors, we decided to take action. The action in this case was calling out Black pastors on their hypocrisy as it relates to the gay community and their relationship to the current Bush Administration.

The outline of the campaign was straightforward. Each day for one week Keith and I profiled a Black pastor highlighting his relationship with the Bush Administration, recent homophobic gay comments, and ending with the question, is this pastor gay? Starting with mega church pastors Bishop Eddie Long and T.D. Jakes, we included profiles of other prominent pastors including Los Angeles' Noel Jones and Bishop Charles Blake, D.C.'s Reverend Willie Wilson, Chicago's Reverend Gregory Daniels, New Orleans' Bishop Paul Morton, Georgia's Creflo Dollar, and ended with a joint profile of ex-gay gospel singer Donnie McClurkin.

For the record, there is nothing wrong with asking a question. My experience has shown that the people who are the most adamant on certain issues also tend to be dealing with their own issues. People who are comfortable with who they are usually don't care as much about what other people are doing. Which lead me to an obvious question, are these pastor's gay?

Remember that despite all of his racist rhetoric, Senator and former segregationist, the late Strom Thurmond fathered a Black daughter to everyone's surprise. Conservative pundit and frequent Republican candidate, Alan Keyes caused a stir during the 2004 Republican convention by labeling Vice President Dick Cheney's lesbian daughter a sinner and calling homosexuality "selfish hedonism." Alan Keyes' daughter Maya is a lesbian.

So you see, being able to point out the hypocrisy that exists in our community is why we have a democracy.

To date, I have received over 1,000 emails regarding this campaign and they still continue to come in. While a good number of the responses that I have received regarding this campaign are positive, I will say that I have received many threats against my life for "bringing harm to a man of God." And if the email wasn't a threat against my life I was blasted for speaking badly about men of God, not notifying the pastors ahead of time and put on notice that I was going to be on a direct path to hell, as opposed to a more scenic view.

Do I have to remind you that anyone can claim to be a man of God? Jim Jones said he was a man of God and because of him 913 people, many of whom were Black are dead. President Bush claims he is a man of God and was called upon by God to lead this country and look at where we are today. Reverend Craig Ward of the Brookings African Methodist Episcopal Church considers himself to be a man of God, but he was still arrested in Oakland for trying to negotiate a 20-dollar oral sex act.

So you see, claiming that you are a man or woman of God does not automatically elevate you to sainthood, at least not in my book.

The other issue that people took offense to was not notifying the pastors ahead of time that they were going to be the subjects of a vicious attack.

Well, I don't recall a memo ever coming across my desk saying that this Sunday's sermon was going to condemn me and those like me to hell. But I am supposed to send them advanced notice on what I plan to do. Seems like a double standard to me.

Depending on what you believe, heaven and hell are both up for interpretation as is religion, period.

I find it hard to believe that someone who has never been to hell and does not know for a fact who's in hell, knows that I am going to hell. Until you can send me a link to a Mapquest with clear directions on how to get to Lucifer's lair, I reserve the right to question your claim that I am going to hell, or even heaven for that matter.

To date, the campaign never specifically "outed" anyone as it pertains to his or her sexual orientation and possible secret sex lives. However, we did expose in depth the ties that certain Black pastors have with the Bush Administration, which is equally dangerous and harmful to Black communities.

In order to institute change, sometimes you have to deviate from traditional methods. That was the case with this campaign. We pushed the envelope and brought the discussion of homophobia in the Black church and President Bush's Faith Based Initiative to mainstream Black America. Had we done just another article about yet another Black preacher spewing hate against gays, we probably wouldn't have garnered as much attention as this single campaign did.

In the words of the great Malcolm X, "usually when people are sad, they don't do anything. They just cry over their condition. But when they get angry, they bring about a change."

This campaign was a way to fight back and to challenge the validity and authority of people using God and religion as a way to oppress a group of people. It sent a clear message that there are those of us in the community, gay and non-gay that are tired of the hypocrisy and double standards where it concerns same-gender loving people and took this conversation out of the Black gay community and introduced it to mainstream Black America.

Personally, I feel that it is my right and my responsibility to get up each and every day and fight oppression in all of its many forms, government, big business, and yes the church. I feel especially duty bound to take up the issue of homophobic Black pastors so that they can redeem themselves before it's too late and go to heaven with me and everyone else, including lesbian and gays that have earned a place up there.

Our campaign may have been the first of its kind, but it is a part of a much larger movement of oppressed voices beginning to speak up for themselves. The days of silence on these issues are long gone on the Black community.

A Celebration of Black Gay History: Reflections On A Year of History in the Making

By Jasmyne A. Cannick

February is here and with it comes a time for national reflection and celebration on the countless contributions to American history made by Blacks.

In looking back over the past year, 2005, like no other year, was the year Black gays proclaimed their independence and their voice in entertainment, politics, sports and civil rights. While we tend to lean towards uplifting and celebrating the more well known Black lesbian and gay heroes and sheroes, I think it's of particular importance that we also take some time to reflect on the many accomplishments made in the past year by the Black same-gender loving community of today that has earned not only a place in Black American History but American gay history as well.

ENTERTAINMENT

Noah's Arc

It was a long time in the making, but Patrik-Ian Polk finally saw the national television debut of his series Noah's Arc in 2005. Being the first ever Black gay themed series, the opening season of Noah's Arc was instrumental in breaking down the barriers of color in the gay entertainment world and has given a voice and a face to a community that for the most part had been invisible on television and in film.

Gearing up for its second season on the new gay network MTV Logo, Patrik and the cast and crew of Noah's Arc have all earned their place in Black gay history.

Clique Magazine

Dwight Powell has taken publishing to a new level with the upgrading of Clique Magazine, now just Click, to a full size monthly publication that is now the drumbeat of the Black gay community. With stunning layouts, illuminating photography and a full news and entertainment section, Dwight and his team have given the community its voice back after the devastating loss of ARISE and Venus Magazines. It feels good to get now get Click in the mail along with my Ebony, ESSENCE, JET, Lesbian News and Advocate Magazines.

Black Gays Get National Talk Show

Herndon Davis is the host and executive producer of his own show, Herndon Davis Reports. The only national Black gay talk show on television, the show airs Thursday nights on the Dish Network, which reaches 17 million households. Herndon Davis Reports did exactly that in 2005, reported on issues important to the Black gay community and is now gearing up for its second season.

POLITICS

Earlier this year, the National Stonewall Democrats under the leadership of Eric Stern, introduced their first ever Black Caucus! With the sole intention of getting more Black same-gender loving persons engaged in gay politics, the Black Caucus is sure to bring some exciting accomplishments to the entire gay community in 2006.

SPORTS

Sheryl Swoopes:

The WNBA's Leading Lady Comes Out

Sheryl Swoopes earned her place righteously in Black gay history when she stepped out on her own and announced that was she was a lesbian. A leading lady in the WNBA for the Houston Comets, Swoopes admitted publicly that she was "tired of having to hide her feelings about the person she loves." Representing for Black lesbians everywhere, Sheryl made us all proud and proved a fact that we have known for a long time, we're everywhere and that includes the WNBA. Hopefully Sheryl has opened the door and paved the way for more lesbians in sports to feel free to come out about their sexual orientation.

RELIGION AND CIVIL RIGHTS

Millions More Movement

Despite all of the controversy surrounding the 10th anniversary of the Million Man March organized by the Nation of Islam and the inclusion of a gay speaker, one thing that cannot be disputed is the fact that Black LGBT/SGL people did participate in this year's commemorative event and at much higher levels than ten years ago. With a personal invitation from Nation of Islam Leader the Honorable Minister Louis Farrakhan, history was made as thousands of lesbians and gay descended upon the nation's capitol to participate in what was probably the largest gathering of Blacks in 2005. News stories both in the Black, mainstream and gay media included the accomplishments, celebrations and yes...the frustrations of a community that continues to be overlooked and ignored.

Black Gays Unite and Fight Back in Atlanta

When Bishop Eddie Long of New Birth Missionary Baptist Church led a march in Atlanta focused on getting a ban on marriage rights for same-sex couples and their families, Atlanta's Black gay community struck back and represented Black gays around the country in voicing their descent. So much so, that news of the anti-gay march was made around the world and the counter protests led by In the Life Atlanta Black Pride and other local groups.

The National Black Justice Coalition

Turns Two

It seems like only yesterday that a group of concerned Black gay activists got together and created what is now the only national Black gay civil rights group in America, the National Black Justice Coalition. Since we started in December 2003, we've made amazing progress, including the launch of a groundbreaking advertising campaign in African American Newspapers calling for marriage equality, convening an historic Black LGBT/SGL Leaders Summit, and the launch of our magazine, NYANSAPO, a quarterly publication that is the only national Black LGBT/SGL magazine for civil rights. As NBJC goes into 2006 with two new board members, we are even more committed to working towards social justice on behalf of the Black LGBT and SGL community.

There's a saying in the Black community that states one that cannot move forward unless they know where they come from. In the spirit of moving forward into 2006 and celebrating February as Black History Month, it's important that we as a community not only reflect on what those before us have accomplished in our name, but what we have accomplished in our own names.

2005 was a very exciting year for Black gays and indeed history was made. Going into 2006, I am looking forward to the many accomplishments that we will continue to make on behalf of our community.

Happy Black History Month and power to the people!

MANIFOLD: HIS LIFE, HIS STYLE

By: Yetu Robinson

Not too long ago, it used to be that when a mother or sister brought home her facial scrub, cleanser and toner, she could be sure that the closest her son and brother got to them was reaching over those fancy jars for his can of shaving cream.

Not any more. In recent years, men have been secretly dipping into their mothers and sisters skin care products and liking the results they see. So much so that many stores are selling skincare lines just for men. One of the latest stores of this kind is Chicago's one and only, Manifold, owned and operated by a Flava brotha, Kevin Jackson.

And men are flocking to these skin care products in droves. Statistics reveal that ethnic men in the United States are spending over $88 million on skincare products. And there is no sign of this trend slowing down.

And why should it? Many men like having smooth, healthy skin. Unightly cuts and razor bumps are no fun. Plus, today's men are looking to achieve that clean, masculine look.

One main difference between skin care for men and women is ease of use. While women may be willing to go through several steps in their beauty regimen, men like their regimen to be quick and easy. One, two, three and they're out the door. Reminiscent of men's dating habits, if you ask me.

Keeping it simple doesn't mean skimping on quality. Men are looking for high quality skin care products just like their female counterparts. Manifold Store is a good example of a store that carries high quality men's skincare lines for all men—particularly men of color.

When I stepped foot into Manifold, I was impressed by the array of stylish products that men could use on a daily basis. When I found that the owner of the store was a black man, I just had to get an interview with him.

Kevin Jackson, owner and sole proprietor of Manifold, calls it a lifestyle store, hence the tag line of the store: His Life, His Style.

How did you get started?

I did not have a background in skin care or dermatology. I studied Government as an undergrad at UVA and earned an MBA at Kellogg.

Afterwards, I worked long days and nights in business marketing in Chicago.

I guess I got started by a desire to work for myself. I decided to leave corporate America to do something innovative and something fulfilling. After considering a variety of options including franchise ownership, I decided to open a lifestyle store for the modern man—straying away from the term metrosexual.

How long have you been active in the Men's Skin Care Revolution?

I suppose the day that I decided that I wanted to work for myself as a sole proprietor. In fact, that decision is what prompted me to find a niche market that was expanding and that was not overly saturated with competitors.

I noticed men were taking care of their skin and that skin care products for men were increasing and that advertisers were targeting all men ranging from gay urban professionals to blue collar, rural types. Even NASCAR had several advertisement campaigns pushing men's skin care or men's style products.

What products do you sell that are specifically designed or helpful for Men of Color?

Prince Reigns is a shaving gel—it goes up against Magic Shave. It is specifically designed to reduce razor bumps. We also have Smart Shave, which helps exfoliate the skin and reduce razor bumps.

I suffer from razor bumps, so I must use a depilatory to shave; is this a good idea? If not what do you recommend for eliminating facial hair.

No, I don't recommend using a depilatory. It is harsh and it burns and sometimes leaves your skin discolored. I would recommend a toner or pigment repair cream to help with skin discoloration.

I have t-zone skin, what products do you sale that you would recommend for cleansing, exfoliating and hydrating my skin?

Malin And Goetz balances out the skin, and Baxter of California is good for all skin types.

What advice do you have for Men of Color who want to take care of their skin?

Stay hydrated year round. Keep the hands and the face moisturized year round. And I know men of color like shea butter, but if you have oily skin it may not be the best thing for you.

Other than skin care products, what products does Manifold offer to men?

As I mentioned, we are a lifestyle store so we sale a little bit of everything—candles, watches, wallets, bags, bar wear, golf and baseball themed gift items.
