The underground house-ballroom scene is going "national." "National" in the sense that whereas New York City used to once dominate the ball scene as its epic center, nowadays Chicago, Atlanta, and Washington D.C. are hosting the most anticipated balls of the year. From the $5,000 Grand Prize at the New York City "Collections Ball" in May to the House of Khan's notorious Memorial Day weekend soiree in Washington D.C., the Spring 2006 season promises to be full of memorable moments and hot-bois abound.

Flavamen's ballroom correspondent Frank Mizrahi gives us the official "blow-by-blow" of where you need to be and what you should expect from this season's hottest "must-attend" functions. We'll see you on the runway!

Flava Notes: The Inside Scoop THE METAMORPHOSIS BALL

Hosted by: Father Flexx Vivant & Father Jose "Stiffy" Revlon

Date: March 4, 2006

Location: Miami Florida

Contact: latnstylzz@aol.com

Admission: $25 be4 12am, $30 after 12am

Start Time: 12am

Website: <http://walk4mewednesdays.net>

Frank's Inside Word: Expect a medium-sized turnout at this Miami function with plenty of Latin papi's and mommies, especially the Florida chapters of the houses of Infiniti and Mizrahi. Stay the weekend and enjoy the hot Latino festival on Sunday night, right after the ball.

SUPERBALL SUNDAY V

Hosted by: The Legendary Icon Mother Jack Mizrahi

Date: Sunday March 12, 2006

Location: New York City, Club Escuelita, 39th Between 8th and 9th

Contact: Destra528@aol.com

Admission: $15 before 12:30, $20 after
Start Time: 1am

Website: www.escuelita.com

Frank's Inside Word: The Superball Sunday's have been a huge mini-ball success in New York City. Superball Sunday V will undoubtedly bring its usual array of highlights, runway divas, vogue femmes, and sexy sex-sirens. Look for the sex-siren ruler Buddah Balenciaga as well as that man with the million dollar smile, the legendary Whitney Miyake-Mugler. Inside word also has it that the icon Octavia St. Laurent (of "Paris Is Burning" fame) will also be walking that night.

THE DEFINITIONS BALL

Hosted by: Father Ahora

Date: March 18, 2006

Location: Charlotte, North Carolina
Club Illusion 1000, Charlotte, NC

Contact: authentic3005@aol.com

Admission: $25 all night

Start Time: 12 a.m

Frank's Inside Word: In recent years the North Carolina scene has made mostly unsuccessful attempts to build its national ballroom presence. The "Definitions Ball," commented by the Legendary Selvyn and Jack Mizrahi might be North Carolina's first shot at gold. Expect a lot of nearby Virginia and Baltimore/D.C. ballroom kids, especially Khans, Revlons, and a few Mizrahi's. That night a special awards ceremony will be held for some of the ballroom's most revered senior members including the show-stopping Andre Mizrahi and the legendary "Realness" ruler Dray Ebony. With a $2006 grand prize for "open to all face" divas like Philly's Jacen Prodigy and New York City's sexy Father Ruben Mizrahi are likely to be in the building.

HAROLD BALENCIAGA'S D.C. CAPITOL AWARD'S BALL

Date: March 25, 2006

Location: Washington D.C.

Frank's Inside Word: Washington D.C. has long been dominated by two houses: The legendary and infamous House of Khan, and the ever growing and rockstocking House of Balenciaga. The "D.C. Capitol Award's Ball" will come on the heels of the Nostaglia Ball held on February 18th, and is expected to feature an equally impressive sized crowd. Considering that the Legendary Father Harold Balenciaga is throwing this function (the King of D.C.) it's likely that attendance will be mega. Look for the sexy Maryland boys like Father Dennis Karan and Leon Khan as well as the "golden girl" beauties of D.C. such as Mother Ayanna Khan and Eygpt Balenciaga.

THE P.O.C.C. BALL

Hosted by: Brooklyn's People of Color in Crisis

Date: April 2, 2006

Location: New York City
Club Spirit, 530 W 27th Street

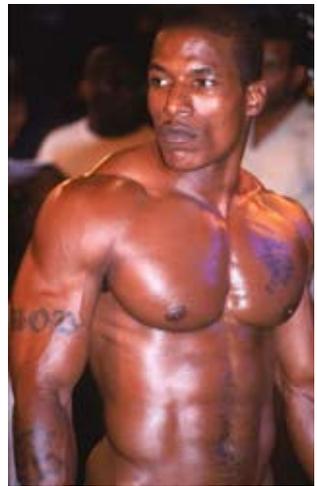

Contact: Michael@pocc.org

Admission: Free all night!

Start Time: 1:30pm

Website: www.pocc.org

Frank's Inside Word: Other than the Latex Ball, this is without question, New York City's most anticipated function of the year. With no admission cover, look for a standing room only, jam-packed crowd (1000+). Expect a major turnout by the three undisputed "powerhouses" of the contemporary scene: House of Mizrahi, Balenciaga, and Prodigy. This will be the ball that creates new legends, and burns the reputation of those already deemed as such. It's a must see. Bring your camera and a fold up chair.

SPRING BLING EXPLOSION 2006

Hosted by: The Legendary-Icon House of Infiniti Detroit

Date: Saturday April 8, 2006

Location: Detroit, Michigan
The Tom Phillip Post

Admission: $30

Frank's Inside Word: Yet another Detroit-Midwest function commented by the Legendary Father Neiman Marcus Escada. Look for a heavy Detroit/Chicago crowd with plenty of Prodigy's and Escada's in the mix. The super sexy Joseph Balenciaga (sex siren) will also be in the building.

THE COLLECTIONS BALL

Hosted by: Godmother Jasmine Mizrahi

Date: April 15, 2006

Location: New York City
(to be announced in March)

Contact: Destra528@aol.com

Admission: $30

Start Time: 12am

Frank's Inside Word: The official millionairess of the ballroom scene, Atlanta's Jasmine Mizrahi will be hosting her first New York City ball. With the grand prize being $5,000 for the house that wins the most trophies, you can guarantee that this will be the hottest ball in New York City in April.

THE NEW YORK CITY AWARD'S BALL

Hosted by: Father Andre & Mother Jack Mizrahi

Date: April 29, 2006

Location: New York
(to be announced in March)

Contact: Destra528@aol.com

Admission: $30

Start Time: 11pm

Frank's Inside Word: This is the Oscar's of the ballroom scene-the absolute best and brightest. Get ready for the red carpet. Look for the men of Ballroom Rockstar Magazine as well as hundreds of the ballroom's super-divas.

PANDEMONIUM IN PARADISE BALL

Hosted by: Japan Manolo-Blahnik

Date: May 6, 2006

Location: Chicago, Illinois

Contact: Japan_Manolo_Blahnik@yahoo.com

Frank's Inside Word: The newcomer Japan Blahnik, who surprised audiences with her win over Montez Mizrahi for men's runway at the Atlanta Awards Ball in January, is throwing her first Chicago function. Insiders say the ball will be commented by the Legendary Selvin Mizrahi. We'll see. Grand Prize for the evening will be $1000 for "Realness as a House."

HOUSE OF KHAN BALL

Date: Memorial Day Weekend

Location: Washington, D.C.

Date: May 27, 2006

Admission: $30

Contact: James Khan, 202-359-0637

Frank's Inside Word: Memorial Weekend just wouldn't be the same with the legendary house of khan ball. Expect the entire rocksocking D.C. based Khan contingency, as well as plenty of gay boi "passerbyers" in town for the rest of D.C.'s delicious weekend events.

THE FASHION TRACE BALL

Hosted by: Japan Manolo-Blahnik, Yummie Prodigy & Selvyn Mizrahi Presents

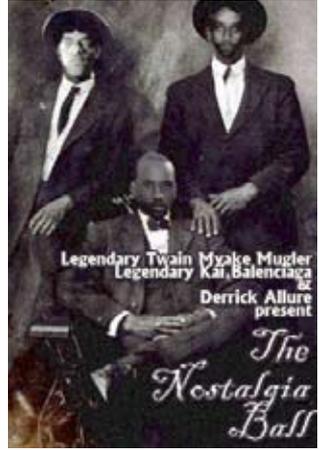

Location: Ball Room Headquarters, Chicago, IL.

Admission: $30

Contact: Japan_Manolo_Blahnik@Yahoo.com

Frank's Inside Word: New York City's Jack Mizrahi, Chicago's Nieman Marcus Escada & and Philadelphia's Jay Manolo Blahnik will be commenting this much anticipated Chicago June fling. The always-delicious

Father Oreo Omni is expected to storm the floor for sex-siren and All American Runway, as are the sexy boys of the House of Mizrahi, including the light-skin bandits' Twan & Chuck Mizrahi. Expect a "who's who" Chicago crowd with plenty of New Yorkers in town for the special occasion.

RUFF RYDER

This biracial Philly resident proves the City of Brotha-ly Love is alive and well – and fine as hell. Long, lean, and bronzed, this thug from the east coast has a voice smooth as silk ... made for a jazz radio station more than for a guy who works with his hands, as Ruff does in his day-to-day construction gig. Admitting to a strong fondness for fine ladies, this lanky sex machine also purrs like a cat when ya bring up the idea of back-door lovin' in the bed – face turning red as he looks away, chuckling that laugh he's got that would make an invitation to lunch sound pornographic. This freak is packin', and he likes using it for all he's worth, however and whenever he can.

Confident to the point of being cocky, Ruff Ryder poses for nude shots like he walks around the city that way; it's rare to find a brotha this comfortable in his own skin. And what skin! The handsome, horny thug admits he easily turns heads on the streets, though someday wants to find that one special someone ... "to curl up in da bed with, get yo' freak on with ... maybe even lick some chocolate syrup off of, until she's screamin' my name and showin' no shame."

He's had his share of offers, but it's not anyone who can get into the man's jeans ... or his heart. "Y'all can look all ya want, but ya gots to get permission to touch," he says, claiming to have put his promiscuous days behind him.

Indeed, we can deal with just looking – because God knows, with this fine brotha, that looking is pleasant enough.

HARRY'S HOUSE
North Philadelphia

This is wrong. We shouldn't be watching this.

What're you talking about Wes? You watch Porn all the time.

I don't usually know the people in 'em.

Turn it off Drew.

Turn it UP!

Harry James Pinkney

I can't believe my New Boyfriend is a Porn Star.

Shhh, here's the good part.

Harry you mean to tell us you had no idea?

Hell naw Wes. But maybe I'm overreacting. I mean how bad can it be? Let's watch it.

Damn!!!

Oh my God!!!

WHOOSH!

Hi Quandra, it's Harry. Can I speak to Devin please?

Oh Hi Harry. I was just about to call you.

Devin wants you to meet him at the OmniFlava Hotel. He's in the Honeymoon Suite.

Tell him I'm on my way.

Will do.

Harry, Honey, where the hell are you going at this hour?

Lord have mercy.

I have to settle this with Devin.

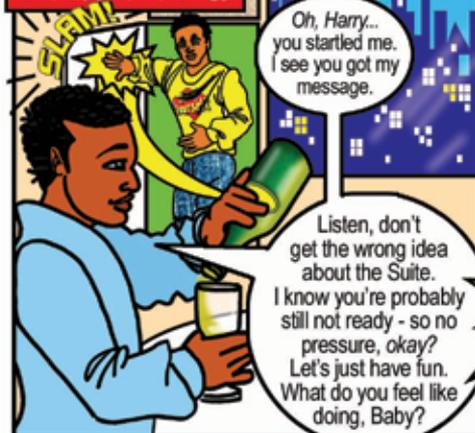

Now?

Right Now!

Okay, okay... then at least put your pants on. I'll drive.

Hey Dawg, if you and Devin are through... give him my number!!!

Honeymoon Suite
OMNIFLAVA HOTEL

Oh, Harry... you startled me. I see you got my message.

Listen, don't get the wrong idea about the Suite. I know you're probably still not ready - so no pressure, okay? Let's just have fun. What do you feel like doing, Baby?

Let's Do DALLAS! Oh, wait... "YOU" already did them!

You should have told me you was a Porn Star.

Guess my secret's out, but I'm far from a Porn Star. I only released one DVD.

C'mon Harry... who's kiddin' who here? I hold an Executive position in a multi-million dollar Adult Industry. You already knew what I do for a living?

I never knew you were in front of the camera, Devin!

You're getting paid for sex. You're no more than a Glorified...

Okay, now you hold on a minute! If you care anything for me at all you'd better not finish that sentence.

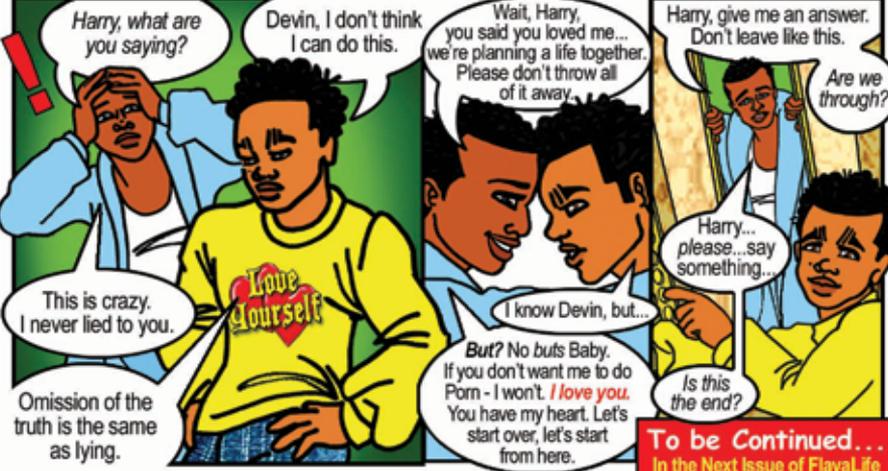

It's only sex with those guys. What you and I have is LOVE. If you gave me half the chance I would show you the difference.

That's just it. I shouldn't have to share you with anyone.

It shouldn't have to be this hard to love you.

All rights reserved. Copyright©2005. Please email your comments/suggestions to: HarrynDaHood@aol.com

Harry, what are you saying?

Devin, I don't think I can do this.

Wait, Harry, you said you loved me... we're planning a life together. Please don't throw all of it away.

Harry, give me an answer. Don't leave like this.

Are we through?

This is crazy. I never lied to you.

Omission of the truth is the same as lying.

Harry... please... say something...

I know Devin, but...

But? No butts Baby. If you don't want me to do Porn - I won't. I love you. You have my heart. Let's start over, let's start from here.

Is this the end?

BLACK AMERICA'S GAY PROBLEM -- CAN ATTITUDES CHANGE IN THE BLACK CHURCH?

By Jasmyne A. Cannick

EDITOR'S NOTE: With the Medicare nightmare, Katrina aftermath and the war in Iraq hitting black America hard, can black church leaders resist bullying gays and get their priorities straight? PNS contributor Jasmyne Cannick says the tide may be turning toward acceptance. Cannick is a board member of the National Black Justice Coalition and a member of the National Association of Black Journalists. She can be reached via her website at www.jasmyne-cannick.com.

LOS ANGELES--After two years of public hatred toward gays from black ministers around the country, attitudes toward gays may finally be changing in the black church. But will cooler heads prevail as another contentious presidential election draws closer and dollars and pulpits are again up for grabs?

Fearing a repeat of the 2004 presidential election, and in an effort to counter the divisive messaging from the Republican Party and white Christian evangelicals, the National Black Justice Coalition, the nation's black gay civil rights group, hosted in Atlanta on Jan. 20-21 a summit of black ministers and black gay activists from around the country to discuss publicly the widespread prejudice against gay men and lesbians within black churches.

The first of its kind, the summit featured the Rev. Al Sharpton, who made good on his 2005 promise of fighting homophobia in the black church.

This meeting comes on the heels of a meeting between black lesbian and gay leaders and Nation of Islam Leader Minister Louis Farrakhan to discuss the inclusion of gays during last year's Million More Movement March.

Although there has been relatively little action on part of Congress or the president to move forward with a ban against same-sex marriage, many black gays are worried that conservative groups will attempt yet again to woo the black vote by using them as scapegoats.

Maryland Senate hopeful Kwesi Mfume recently came out in support of extending equal rights to gay and lesbian couples but stopped short of endorsing gay marriage. Before California's Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger vetoed a bill that would have provided his gay constituents with equal rights, five of the six members of the California Legislative Black Caucus and the California NAACP all voted in favor of the bill.

So perhaps attitudes are changing in a U.S. community that many believe to be the most homophobic of all the races.

In a November 2003, a Pew Research Poll found that blacks oppose gay marriage by roughly 2-to-1.

In the aftermath of Katrina, the war in Iraq, the Medicare nightmare and the issues with Social Security reform, maybe blacks have realized that they have bigger fish to fry than worrying about two men or two women wanting to provide for their families.

At the end of the day, the national crisis for blacks is not gays getting married. The real issue for blacks is how easily we allowed ourselves to be distracted and bamboozled into thinking that it was.

While I don't think the black church is going to do a 180 on gay marriage overnight, it is very possible that Sharpton and other progressive black ministers can lead by example.

However, for gays, this is going to continue to be an uphill battle. Even though most black gays and lesbians attend black churches, they are still outsiders. Many blacks still consider homosexuality the mother of all sins, though many have a family member who identifies as lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgender. When you add to that the common misperception that the fight for gay rights is a "white thing," there's the very real potential for another nasty campaign season. And while gays may have Rev. Sharpton, Mfume and a few civil rights organizations on their side, they have relatively little clout in influencing policy compared to the voters. That's why white conservative groups are sparing no dollar in trying to entice support from black ministers.

More than a few mega-church pastors have already teamed up with powerful conservative groups to cajole and lobby black voters into supporting anti-gay initiatives and the Republican Party. Utilizing the media, these pulpit bullies are spreading their hate doctrine via television, radio and the Internet.

One thing is for sure: Silence is not going to be an opportunity afforded to black leaders and elected officials, including members of Congress this time around. We are going to have to talk about the black community's gay problem and deal with this issue head on. We've already seen the mayhem that can come from the wrong message at election time.

The message this time around needs to be one of common sense. Gay marriage is not going to put us in a costly war or solve our health-care problems. However, if we let gay marriage take our eyes from the prize, we will ensure that blacks -- gay and straight alike -- will stay at the bottom of the totem pole for another four years. ■

Hip-Hop Stars Find Gay Is Good

By Rod McCullom

"I did it for the people who needed some love, you know what I mean?"

That's how DeMario Thornton—aka Raz B, the former member of the chart-topping boy band B2K—describes his decision to play at a black pride event last summer. The 20 year-old heart-throb turned more than a few when he announced that August he would play at Oakland's Black in the Life. "They approached me," he recalls in a recent interview. "And when they did, they were kind of scared about it because of the type of artist I am."

For the most part, young male hip-hop and R&B performers are almost compelled to publicly proclaim their masculinity, virility and availability to women. Some stars—for example, 50 Cent, Ja Rule—have made headlines with their "no homo" comments, which, in both cases, followed gay rumors. Grammy Award-winning artist Usher also jumped into the fray. In the December/January issue of Complex, he was asked about the rumored sex parties with groupies.

Were there ever homosexual activities in any of these orgies?

There was women-on-women but never man-on-man. Shit, nowhere near that! Hell no! No one that I ever roll with or would ever roll with would get down like that.

But times change. In late January, Raz B performed for the boys again—this time at Club 501 in Washington DC. In an interview at the event—a podcast by PinkMafiaRadio.com—he says that his decision to play for the gays was not difficult. "If you don't like someone because of their sexual preference, there's something wrong with you," he said. "I'm about lifting people up, not putting people down."

Raz B says his strong spiritual base that lead him first to Oakland and later Washington. "God led me to do that," he says. "And to get my confirmation, two days after I did the performance, Kanye's on TV talking about issues with a lot of gay people and stuff like that, you know what I mean?"

This was an reference to the Kanye West's August interview on MTV. "Everyone in hip-hop discriminates against gay people," Kanye said, adding that on the streets, gay is "the opposite, the exact opposite word of hip-hop. Not just hip-hop, but America just discriminates. And I wanna just, to come on TV and just tell my rappers, just tell my friends, 'Yo, stop it.'"

To highlight society's hypocritical homophobic attitudes, Raz B points out that some artists and athletes have been accused of rapes or assaults. "But if you're gay, that's supposed to be worst. That's just wrong."

Several other black male artists are following that route. In November, Mr. Cheeks—former front man for the Lost Boys and the rapper responsible for the mega party hit "Lights Camera Action"—performed at The Edge in our nation's capitol, one of the biggest gay black clubs in the nation. In February, The Edge was also supposed to host Ray J—the younger brother of pop icon Brandy, whose boyish looks and melodious voice have thrilled both men and women. But Ray J's club date was cancelled; no particular reason was given, but the promoters hoped to reschedule his appearance. Instead, they booked Tyson Beckford, well known to be gay-friendly and supportive HIV/AIDS causes. Ticket sales soared.

Raz B says that he and Ray J will perform for their gay fans. "We support everything," he said at the January club event. "We can't be afraid to step out of the box. I'm proud of my boy Ray J. People call me gay and him gay, but it takes a lot of humility to do something like that because you get persecuted." The result: Both Raz B and Ray J may tour more for gay audiences. "June is gay pride month and my new album drops on June 13th. That's my birthday when I turn 21. So, I'll be doing more gay events."

Raz B is crafting his own solo career and his new website, RazMe.com, displays his maturity. The new album, "Raz: Revealer of Secrets" is a departure from the bubblegum hip-hop of B2K. A huge bonus: Michael Jackson will appear one of the tracks. "of all the artists, Michael Jackson chos eto work with me," he proudly says. "The music is more alternative, rock and roll, kind of country. Really different." The newer sound, independent label and more mature styling may be prompting him to expand his horizons.

It's great to see this level of maturity from a hip-hop artist, especially one so young. And here's an added bonus: Surprisingly, he is not upset by the gay rumors that began after his first club appearance. DeMario Thornton says it's all good. "No discrimination to anybody. I come here with a heart of love." ■

Tidus Interviews Quincy LeNear & Deondray Gossett Creators of the DL Chronicles

Look out John Singleton and Spike Lee. We have two new writers/ producers/ directors ready to make their public debut with their guns blazing. I was at a premiere screening in Oakland, CA this past December and I got the honor of being one of the first to watch the pilot episode of a provocative series about sexual discovery cleverly titled The DL Chronicles. Believe me when I say that it was a great experience. This show takes the everyday decisions that men who have sex with men go through. The series is set to look at the experiences of different DL circumstances from the point of view of a young writer, Chadwick Williams, who narrates the series. It examines all men, from men working executive level jobs to street corner hustlers. The DL Chronicles portrays the face of the DL man as a learner of life and not one who hides from his reality.

Who are these triple-threats, you may ask? Quincy LeNear and Deondray Gossett are their names and they are the masterminds behind this innovative project. Upon meeting them, I got the idea that Quincy was more of the social type and Deondray was the shy type, but I came to realize that they are both pretty social. Deondray also co-stars in the short film On the Low. So, I had the chance to get to know the two and find out what fueled them to start such a bold series. Creating a drama that pushes ignored envelopes isn't the only thing that makes this series interesting. They are also a couple, a very sexy couple if I do say so myself. They are an example that the combination of personal and professional, if used right, can yield remarkable results.

The episode was very interesting. It involves a married couple, Wes and Sarah Thomas, who are having intimacy issues. And all of a sudden, Sarah's brother Ty moves in. After bumping heads with Wes, sexual tension starts to heat up. There is a lot more to the episode, but I won't ruin it for you. I'll only say that it is a must see for anybody and because of it, I had to interview this up and coming power couple.

Tidus: I would first like to thank you both on behalf of FlavaLife magazine for taking the time to interview with us.

Quincy: Welcome, we are actually honored that Flava wanted to do an interview with us.

Tidus: My first question is, what inspired you two to start the series and how long did it take you from the first step up to finishing the pilot episode?

Quincy: Deondray and I were watching Oprah Winfrey's special about men on the DL and felt that it was a misrepresentation on intentions of the DL man. They only showed it from a point of view of women who were infected with the HIV virus, so it only was the negative side of the DL life, depicting them as deceitful men who only lie to women and infect them with diseases from other gay men. And we both knew that is not true.

Deondray: To add on to Quincy's answer, yeah we felt that the image of DL men was completely distorted, so we personally wanted to expose people to the more positive and real image.

Quincy: Second part of your question, we came up with the idea for the series at the beginning of 2004. During the first year we pretty much worked to get people to work on it, someone to produce it, just a main plan on how to get it done. Shooting for the pilot episode took place June of 2005- it only took two weekends. And everyone who was working on it weren't even getting paid; they were just people who really believed in the project.

Tidus: Damn, that's dedication for you. At some point in time did either of you relate to any of the characters in The DL Chronicles? And did anyone portray a particularly masculine role before identifying as gay?

Quincy: Yeah, I think I have a part of all of the characters. Yet, I think if you are gay, there was some point in time in your life where you did relate to any one of the characters. Fighting with your sexuality is a part of the evolution throughout one's life. I can mainly relate to Wes, the DL man who wants to be married and to be seen to be living the ideal heterosexual life.

Deondray: Of course! I can relate to more than just one of the characters. Growing up, I took on the personality of Ty, being very vague about my sexuality when telling people. Not really saying I'm straight or gay, just leaving something to the imagination. I even relate to the wife, Sarah, as far as having aspirations for a family. Wanting to have children and wanting to be loved in your relationship can usually be hard when you are gay.

Tidus: I truly agree with you. Just to get off the series for a moment, when and how did the both of you meet?

Deondray: We met in '96. Quincy is originally from Chicago and came to go to school in Los Angeles. Before knowing each other, we had a mutual friend in college that always used to say to one or the other that they had a friend that reminded them of the other, which was before he had even known that either one of us was gay.

Tidus: That's hot. As a couple, I would assume that you two have complete different personalities. Were there any artistic differences before or during the creating stages of this project?

Quincy: All the time. But we have both learned how to weigh the best of both our ideas on what should be written, production decisions, and who should be chosen to play what role. But we marry the best of ours ideas and usually come up with results that we are both cool with. We take on two different roles when we do work together. I act as the visionary and come up with what we should do and Deondray is the executioner and comes up with a plan on how to get it done. And because of it, we actually prefer to only work with each other.

Tidus: Are there any other projects people should anticipate after viewing The DL Chronicles outside of the following episodes?

Quincy: There are other projects in the works such as other series and a few feature films.

Tidus: That's real cool. An ongoing argument that will probably never be settled is: "Are men born gay or is it always a choice?" What are your feelings on that argument?

Quincy: Generalizations can't really prove whether or not a man is born gay or chooses to be. Environment and genetics are two completely different comparisons when addressing that subject. Where does being gay lie? Is it in the physical act or do you actually live a gay life in order to be perceived as a gay man?

Deondray: I absolutely think it is genetic. I feel with today's discrimination towards gay people, no one would consciously choose to be gay. Men are born gay, but are not aware of it even if there are telltale signs of it in early ages. Men learn to notice it and except it as they grown older.

Tidus: How do you feel about the current portrayal of black and Latino gay men in the media?

Quincy: There is real a lack of portrayal. And when there is a portrayal, we only get the more stereotypical, real feminine gay man who dresses in women's clothing and just flames out. If you get an image that is the least bit masculine, he's a cheater, he neglects his children.

Deondray: I feel the same as Quincy. Right now, the media is only comfortable with the stereotypes. They don't feel as threatened when they see the queen, or the extremely shy man who holds everything inside. Actually exploring the real DL experience can help film and print as far as creating more positive portrayals.

Tidus: Do you two personally feel that in a group of people who need as much support as possible, that the DL man works against the goal that we all are trying to achieve for respect among their heterosexual counterparts?

Quincy: No, if you understand why the phenomenon exists and why there is so much stigma behind being DL, when you look at the classes, families, and communities that these men come from, you can fully know what these men are going through. I feel that the DL man is actually the missing link between gay and straight. Defining what actually makes a man.

Deondray: After the whole Down Low scene was brought to the mainstream's attention, a woman approached me on the street and she was trying to pursue me. After short conversation, I told her that I was gay. She responded "So, you must be on the DL" and I told her that I wasn't on the DL. She replied back that I would have to be DL due to the fact that I didn't look gay. I continued explain my sexuality, but she refused to accept the idea that I was gay, looking the way that I did and not being on the DL. So, the DL man isn't really working against us; it is the straight perception of gay people that keeps the DL man from contributing to the community.

Tidus: On your reactions from people who have already viewed the DL Chronicles: How do you feel the success rate will be compared to the success of the more Eurocentric view on the same sex oriented series such as Queer As Folk and The L Word?

Quincy: We are up against the same "colored structured" success rate as any other black show on television. Most white shows that are being showed on popular channels such as HBO and Showtime get heavily exposed to the public, so they have no choice but to be successful. We do know that there is a want for this series. Upon the completion of the website in October, we have gotten over 150,000 hits and that's within less than three months. So, there are people out there who really want to see this series.

Tidus: Is there any last piece of advice you would like to leave for a man on the DL who struggling with similar internal conflicts as your characters?

Deondray: Just be honest, and this is to men and women alike. Be honest with who you are and act upon your own wishes. And if you continue to live a DL life, just make sure not to involve innocent people with your actions.

Quincy: Pretty much the same thing. Life is far too short and many of us spend too much time worrying how people see us. Become comfortable with yourself and comfortable around others. Being comfortable with ourselves is very healthy for our own emotional well being.

Tidus: I'd like to thank the both of you again before I go. It's an inspiration to see two gay black men succeeding at something that they believe in.

Quincy: You're very welcome; we had a really good time. Later.

Deondray: Yeah, it's cool to know that people are really trying to find out more about series. Look forward to hearing from FlavaLife again. Peace.

ROY SIMMONS COMES OUT AND COMES CLEAN

By Rod McCullom

Roy Simmons made history as only the second pro-football player to come out of the closet. Since then, his fortunes and behavior have not been without controversy. In 1992, seven years after being cut from the NFL, Simmons announced his sexuality before an audience of millions on Donahue. At the time, he was only the second NFL player to come out post-retirement. (Dave Kopay came out in '75, and later, Esera Tuaolo in 2002.) A decade later, the former Giants lineman revealed that he was HIV-positive, becoming the first pro-footballer to do so. Just a few years ago, Simmons admitted that it was an addiction to cocaine that cost him his pro-football career and forced him on the streets to turn tricks. Much more recently he has charged the NFL with discrimination.

Obviously, Roy Simmons has had more than his share of bad luck and now, for the first time, he reveals his entire story. Out of Bounds is a tragic glimpse into a promising life and career that was cut short by shame, greed and fear. Unlike most celebrity autobiographies, it reveals much more than it hides. And, at only 276 pages, you could easily read the memoir in a day or two because it's so compelling. Out of Bounds has all the makings of a Lifetime tearjerker.

At eleven years old, a neighbor raped him. However, the boy returned to his abuser and accepted cash for more sessions, rationalizing that if he were paid for sex ... it was okay. By his freshman year at Georgia Tech, Roy was no longer in denial; he began frequenting sex clubs near campus, knowing that exposure could cost him his football scholarship. "I have to admit that I was excited. Excited and very, very curious.”

By the skin of teeth, Roy avoided detection and was drafted by the Giants in 1979. New York City’s sexual underground of the early 1980s was the perfect incubator to mature his increasing appetite for sex and drugs. The offensive lineman lead the classic double life, appearances with women during the daytime and having quick encounters with men during the night. No one was the wiser. “It’s easy for a gay person to hide out in the open when everyone else in the world is convinced you’re straight.” Naturally, his playing suffered; Simmons admits to barely making practice or playing while nursing a hangover.

“My gay side took a beating in the locker room as far as my pride was concerned,” he writes. “There I was surrounded by all these fine-looking men. Couldn’t have a single one of them. Didn’t even want to think about it lest I give myself away somehow.

However, Simmons was flirtatious with some players, given to teasing and horsing with defensive end Gary Jeter. “Jeter used to call me “fat ass,” “cocksucker” and “faggot” he recalls. “Looking back, I think he might have known that I was gay.” However, soon the games would end: “With all this sexual tension in the air, it made things tough for me. Not exactly uncomfortable, but definitely challenging.” Simmons gave in to the challenge during his second year with the Giants when he had his “first and only sexual experience with a teammate.”

No names are mentioned but Simmons says the player was on the offensive line. One night they went out to a club in New York City, drank, partied, dropped some Quaaludes—these was the eighties—but the chemical combination proved to be too much for the teammate. Roy brought him home:

I sat down next to him and started running my fingers over his forehead, just to comfort him. His skin was hot, but at the same time he was kind of cold and clammy. When I ran my fingers through his hair, he seemed to like that, too. He shifted a little on his side and mumbled some more. To make a long story short, he asked me to suck his dick. I did.

There’s much more sex in the book and it’s very descriptive. Simmons is painfully honest; it seems that he usually took a passive role in the drug-fueled encounters and has no complaints.

Roy’s fairly undistinguished career with the Giants came to an end after just a few seasons. He says that he never gave his all to the game for fear of “being put under a microscope” and his secrets would be revealed. But the good news: the Redskins drafted him. Playing with them would be the zenith of his career—Super Bowl XVIII when the team faced the Raiders in 1984.

By that time, Roy Simmons was a train wreck. He invited three lovers to the game—two women, one man—and had them stay on different floors of the same hotel. It was a non-stop weekend of partying and sex and his on-field performance reflected as much. After the big game, he was cut from the team and his life spiraled downhill—he throws his career away for drugs, fathers a daughter that he never really knows, escapes to San Francisco to trick on the streets, attempts suicide, fails rehab several times ... the story reads more like the bio of a former circuit boy or porn star than a promising sports hero. Particularly sad is the fact that Simmons doesn’t even have his Super Bowl ring because a trick stole it just days after it was presented to him.

Roy Simmons isolation was compounded by the additional stigma of homosexuality among black athletes. In the essay “Black Gay Athletes,” Keith Boykin finds that many gay black athletes who have come out of the closet have not been welcomed. “Almost all of them suffered through tragedy or controversy,” Boykin notes. In contrast to Simmons’ lukewarm reception, Dave Kopay is somewhat of an icon in the mainstream gay community, and, Esera Tuaolo has been a poster boy for activists and sports fans. The latter’s book, Alone in the Trenches, was just released on March 1.

Besides Simmons’ race, he is also an admitted substance abuser, former hustler, and, carries the unfortunate stigma of HIV. This is probably not “the” preferred image of a professional football player. That’s what Simmons claimed on February 9, when he held a news conference with celebrity attorney Gloria Allred and said that the NFL denied him entry to the Super Bowl’s media center. Simmons charges discrimination and adds that many of his former teammates were allowed access and free tickets to the game. “I was once part of the inner circle — now I’m standing on the outside looking in,” That certainly may be true—it’s likely that the league wants him to fade into history, but, that will never happen during a book tour. On a recent segment of the “Howard Stern Show,” the radio shock jock provided three names to Simmons—John Elway, Dan Marino and Joe Montana—and told him that he would have to play “kill, fuck, marry.” Simmons’ choices were: “Kill Elway. Fuck Marino. Marry Montana.”

So what would he say if the choices were Tiki Barber, Jerome Bettis and Michael Vick?
